Help for seriously ill children

Children's hospice service organizes therapies and excursions / Markert Group donates 5000 euros

The Markert Group donates 5,000 euros for a good cause: The money reaches families struggling with serious illnesses. The recipient of the donation is the non-profit association Muschel, an outpatient children's and youth hospice service from Bad Segeberg. With its volunteer staff, the association accompanies families in which the parents or children are suffering from life-shortening illnesses, offering several measures to help. Affected children have the opportunity to experience emotional support and to take advantage of therapeutic measures. In addition, opportunities are created to make everyday life varied and fun, for example through excursions or workshops.

"For us as a company, it is important to do our part in the region to support children and young people," says Aline Steiner, Head of Communications & Marketing at Markert Group. The company is using the donation to focus attention on the issues of loss and serious illness. These are often avoided out of fear.

The association is always happy to hear from new people interested in volunteering. Information is available on the association's website and by calling 04551/802 3030.
